Housing Stability for Youth in Courts (H-SYNC) is a prevention model that was developed by the University of Washington CoLab team in collaboration with community and county partners. The program is designed to identify youth at risk of homelessness within the juvenile court system and refer them and their families to needed prevention, intervention, and housing services. The YMCA of Greater Seattle has been awarded $625,000 to serve as a lead coordinator of H-SYNC program sites in six counties.
